STRANGE SPECTACLE

Scenes on the Scaffold at Hayward's Execution.

A GAMBLER'S PHRASE ON HIS LIPS

Indulged in an Incoherent, Rambling Talk.

IN THE DIMLY LIGHTED JAIL

MINNEAPOLIS Minn December 11 -With a gambler's phrase upon his lips and a cold smile upon his face, Harry Hayward, Catherine Ging's murderer, faced the eterral this morning. "Pull her tight, I'll stand pat." These were the last words he uttered as the deputy pulled the well-soaped noose as tightly about the murderer's neck as he could in order that death might come the more quickly and the more surely. It was twelve minutes past 2 o'clock when Sheriff Holmberg pulled the lever, and thus released the trap upon which Harry-Hayward stood. In just thirteen minutes Coun ty Physician Frank Burton declared that the swinging figure in which not a movement or struggle had been observed was that of a dead man. The final act in the great tragedy of life and death had been played, and the curtain had been rung down on the career of the chief actor.

The coolest man at his own execution was Harry Hayward. Not a man of the little knot of privileged spectators who had kept a long vigil in the big gray room but whose heart thumped more loudly and importunately than one which was so soon to cease its beating; not a face but turned more ghastly than his in the gruesome light. The cne gas jet had been turned off, and the room was illuminated only by a locomotive head light suspended about four teet from the floor opposite the scaffold. The huge cone of light threw a horrid, dis-The huge cone of light threw a horrid, dis-The huge cone of light threw a horrid, distorted shadow of the engine of death on the rough, whitewashed stone wall behind. Two rooses were discernible, both well tried and tested, one being held in reserve. A deputy had carefully chalked two circles where the feet of the doomed man were to stand, and had outlined the trap that there might be no mistake in the uncertain light. certain light.

The chief deputy mounted the scaffold. where Warden Wolfe of the state peniten-tiary, ex-Sheriff Winn Bracket and Sheriff Chappell of St. Paul were already waiting.

Chappell of St. Paul were already waiting, and directed that every hat be removed and that there be no smoking. A cordon of policemen filed in, and made a little passageway for the death party.

Meanwhile, the prisoner had been made ready in the cell room, his black silk robe had been put on, and the black cap adjusted. Suddenly the door was drawn wide open, and the sound of an inarticulate yell emanated from the cell room when yell emanated from the cell room, where the prisoner's comrades were taking their farewell; then three hoarse cheers for the sheriff, Holmberg, led by Hayward himself, and ending with "He's all right." It was awful, such a demonstration led by a man on his way to meet his death by a man on his way to meet his death. As its echoes died away the sheriff appeared, followed by the prisoner between Deputies Bright and Anderson, and Deputy Megaarden bringing up the rear. Harry Hayward entered the death chamber with the same easy stride that markethis promenades when he was a "swagger" "Good evening, gentlemen," said he in "Good evening, gentlemen," said he in clear and even tones, as he bowed his way into the room, wearing his somber garb so jauntily that grotesqueness was forgotten. He made his way up the stairs to the scaffold, but tripped on the unaccustomed gown. This amused him, and he laughed at the misstep. As he strode upon the trap the deputies looked more like frightened children clinging to a parent than officers of law.

Carefully placing his feet on the marked spot he drew his splendid figure to its greatest height and glanced about with a calm face, occasionally brightened by a smile of recognition as he descried some friend in the crowd.

His Farewell Words.

Upon being asked if he had anything to say he replied in a careless, drawling

"Where's Uline?" he went on, somewhat disconnectedly. "Uline here? I promised to take his dog with me under my arm to make him a record. It would be a great thing at

"Say nothing more in that line," came in low, distinct tones from Mannix. "You are about to meet your God, and should express here your forgiveness for your brother as you did so nobly to me today, and with thoughts of your mother and father before you, you should act as you have during the last forty-eight hours, meeting death manfully and forgiving all those toward when you have borne any ill-will up to this time."

"Forgive him," said Harry, as Mann'x finished, "well, I have freely forgiven him for any imaginary memory be thick by head finished, "well. I have freely forgiven him for any imaginary wrong he thinks he has done me. He has done me no wrong. I have done him a great wrong. Father Cleary, Father Timothy and Father Christy have taken great interest in me and have exerted themselves greatly about my spiritual welfare. I have the greatest respect for each of them. For John Day Smith, my lawyer, also. He is a good man and a Christian as well as a lawyer, and I have promised him to say something here tonight which I should have probably have said of my own accord."

"Oh," resumed Harry, dropping back to his former easy tone, "is Goodsell here?" When told that Goodsell was absent he continued, "Well, Dr. Burton, I think I have

What it was will never be known, for the doctor stopped him with the suggestion that he had better not say anything.

It was Harry's last glimpse of earth.
"Pull her tight, I'll stand pat," he said.
Megaarden stepped back, raised his hand in the fatal signal, and like a shot the body dropped through the opened trap. The spectators waited breathlessly while the doctor listened to the fluttering heart. Thirteen long minutes passed. Dr. Burton stepped back, and the spectators began to file out. Awaiting the Summons.

Before dark morbid crowds had assembled in the vicinity of the jail. There was nothing to see except the gray walls and the occasional opening of the heavy doors to admit some official, yet they lingered in waiting for the tragic event. At milnight the throng numbered several hundred.

As Capt. Sandberg was covering the windows of the jall, looking into the alley, Harry noticed him and shouted: "That's right. Block out the gaping crowd. There will be You'd better ord r all the BLANK BOOKS

Hayward spent a considerable portion of Hayward spent a considerable portion of the evening telling stories and listening to stories by others. It being his last night, he was allowed quite a privilege, and was continually surrounded by friends. He spoke about his wife occasionally for he insisted about his wife occasionally, for he insisted she was his wife. He said he gave her $50

she was his wife. He said he gave her $50 to make her feel good. He passed cigars around freely and talked about his great meal. The toast he proposed at his dinner was: "Here's to the girl who loves me and to the girls whom I love." He gave it in the French. During the evening Hayward held a long conversation with his attendants, and laughed and joked on the subject of his apraughed and joked on the subject of his approaching execution.

To the newspaper men he said: "I would like to see the account of how this thing came out and about my actions on the scaffold," and again he laughed as if he were

THE OLEOMARGARINE WAR.

Treasury for Information.

In the next few days the indictments found against a number of persons who are alleged to have violated the laws governing the sale of oleomargarine in the District of Columbia will be drawn up, and the cases under them will be presented to the Criminal Court for immediate action. The press of business at the city hall has delayed somewhat the preparation of these documents, and this has caused those engaged in the sale of imitation butter to repeat their assurances that the prosecution peat their assurences that the prosecution of the alleged violators had been dropped, and that nothing more would be heard from the internal revenue or legal authorities on the subject.

The individuals making these assertions are understood to base them upon the belief that the government will allow persons charged with violations of the law to pay the money penalties prescribed under the statutes, and thus relieve themselves from the publicity of a trial as well as the possibility of a sentence of both fine and imprisonment in case a conviction is secured in their cases.

It is well known that such a course was pursued in many similar cases before both here and elsewhere. In those instances, however, it is understood the treasury officials were afraid the testimeny they could present was not sufficient to presure con-

Keeping a Nuisance.

Members of the South Washington Citizens' Association were present in the Police Court this morning as interested spec tators in the case of a colored man named Lewis Jefferson, who was charged with maintaining a nuisance on South Capitol street between I and K streets. The alleged nuisance consisted of an immense pile of manure, probably one thousand cart loads. The attention of the authorities was called to the presence of this alleged nuisance by the citizens' association, a was only after considerable trouble the officials were able to discover who owned the manure, and he was served with the necessary notice to abate the same. Having failed to comply with the notice a warrant was issued, and the case was heard today. Judge Kimball heard the evidence and told the old man there was no excuse for his continuing to maintain the nuis-ance after all the time he had been given, and fined him $25 or sixty days on the farm.

Had a Chance.

The Tenleytown fire brigade had a chance this morning to give the village residents an exhibition of its efficiency. About 9:30 o'clock George Donaldson discovered that there was fire in the house of William T Burrows, on the Grant road, where a defective flue was the cause of the trouble.

ST. LOUIS SELECTED

The National Republican Convention to Be Held There.

JUNE 16 FIXED AS THE DATE

Primaries Decided Upon for Electing District Delegates.

THE BALLOTS TAKEN

"We are burning the city up." was the significant telegram received last night at the Arlington by Mayor Walbridge and Mr. S M Kennard of St Louis from a number of enthusiastic citizens of the Missouri metropolis. There was scarcely less enthus lesm among the Missourians in Washington than that indicated in St. Louis by the telegram, and until a late hour they were cele brating the victory won before the nation al republican committee. It was particular ly pleasing to them that they had defeated Chicago in the scramble for convention honors, and this consideration added more zes to their happiness and more power to their eltows when they proceeded to crook them An Exciting Scene.

The scene at the Arlington when the com mittee reassembled yesterday afternoon to settle the all-important question of the lican national convention was exciting and interesting. While it was almost a foregone conclusion that St. Louis would pull the plum, the representatives redoubled their efforts and made a brave fight. The Chicagoans asserted with every appearance of confidence that they could not lose the prize, and declared that San Francisco pr.ze, and declared that san Francisco would throw its strength in the direction of the windy city when a decisive ballot seemed in order. The Californians, however, declared they were in the fight for themselves alone, and would hold their forces together until the last ditch was reached. Many efforts were made to make combinations, but they ended in nothing combinations, but they ended in nothing, and when the committee went into executive session a St. Louis warrior assured his friends that six of the votes promised to Pittsburg would go to St. Louis as soon as they were wanted.

District of Columbia Matter. When the doors were closed the question of the representation of the southern states in the next convention was taken up, and then the District of Columbia was made a bone of contention. All cay the Arlington corridors had been crowded with local poli-ticians. Andrew Gleeson, Calvin Chase, Marticians. Andrew Gleeson, Calvin Chase, Marcellus Bailey and a host of other anti-Carson men hung around and buttonholed committeemen. They wanted the committee to pass a resolution, already prepared, declaring that the District delegates to the next republican national convention should be elected directly by votes cast at a primary election, instead of being selected at a convention, as heretofore. Powell Clayton introduced this proposition in the committee, and with it was coupled the proviso that the committee should name three persons, who should fix the time and place for holding the primary, and also have the power to appoint judges for such election. When the matter was brought up Col. Perry Carson was called on by the committee to give his views on it. He candidly expressed his preference for the old system, but said it made no difference to him how delegates should be chosen, because he was bound to be one of them. The resolution was then son was called on by the committee to give his views on it. He candidly expressed his preference for the old system, but said it made no difference to him how delegates should be chosen, because he was bound to be one of them. The resolution was then agreed to, and Messrs. Carson and Gleeson were named as two of the supervisors, the third to be appointed by Chairman Carter. There was much disappointment among the local contingent in the corridors when this action was known. Most of them had come cocked and primed with speeches, which they imagined they would have a chance to fire off by reason of the committee giving them a hearing on the resolution, but in this they were fooled, and they could not conceal their unhappiness.

Down to Balloting.

Down to Balloting.

When the District matter was settled, Virginia affairs were discussed in a casual vay, and then the committee proceeded to the real business for which it was called. The question of time was quickly decided, the original proposition to hold the conven tion June 16 being adopted unanimously after several amendments to fix upon date after several amendments to fix upon dates in July and August were voted down.

This being settled, an informal ballot was taken upon the question of a place. It resulted as follows: San Francisco, 20; St. Louis, 13; Chicago, 8; Pittsburg, 9; New York, 1.

A motion was made and carried that on future ballots the city assistance. A motion was made and carried that on future ballots the city receiving the lowest number of votes would be dropped fram succeeding ballots. On the second call of the roll the result was: San Francisco, 19; St. Louis, 14; Chicago, 8; Pittsburg, 9.

This was greeted by the friends of St. Lcuis &s a sure sign of eventual success, and the next ballot showed this confidence was well founded, as the figures show: San Francisco, 19; St. Louis, 18; Chicago, 9; Pittsburg, 5.

It was seen that four votes from Pitts burg had gone to St. Louis on this ballot, and there were offers of 50 to 1 made that St. Louis would get it on two more ballots

The Committee of Arrangements. The committee adjourned at 6 p.m., after appointing a committee with full power to make all arrangements for the national convention, consisting of Manley of Maine chairman; Carter, Montana; Clarkson, Iowa Hahn, Onio; Clayton, Arkansas; Kerens, Missouri, and Campbell, Illinois. This committee was in conference with the St. Louis delegation today. Mrs. J. Ellen Foster addressed the committee on woman's influence in the party, and the committee recommended that New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Oktoberme he allowed to select air delegation. and Oklahoma be allowed to select six dele

Congratulations Exchanged Over the Success of Its Emissaries.

There is general rejoicing in St. Louis over the action of the national republican committee in selecting that city as the place for the holding of the next national republican convention in June, 1896. Not alone those who will be directly benefited by the convention and its attendant crowds showed their interest in the action of th national committee, but everybody seemed enthused. Long before the bulletins anouncing the vote of the committee on the location had been posted in newspaper offices windows large crowds of people assembled, and when the final ballot was put up announcing that St. Louis had won the prize the enthusiasm was unbounded. At the offices of the Business Men's 'League, the offices of the Business are s League, which has a committee in Washington, bulletins were received by telegraph every few minutes after the voting commenced, and when it was seen that St. Louis was steadily gaining there was much rejoicing. Almost simultaneously with the receipt of a bulletin announcing the result of th inal ballot the following dispatch from S M. Kennard was delivered to James Cox secretary Business Men's League:

"The battle is fought and won. Our friends are celebrating and everybody is happy. Representatives of St. Louis in Washington, without exception, have been earnest, hopeful and valiant." Congratulations came in over the tele-hone in quick succession, and jubilation became general.

Secretary Cox, in discussing the result, said that the information received prior to the departure of the committee for Washington convinced him that the delegation would bring back the convention and the result was by no means a sur-'We are not quite out of the woods yet,' "We are not quite out of the woods yet," he added. "When the committee started we were $20,000 short of the funds absolutely necessary to entertain the convention and maintain the reputation of St. Louis for hospitality. This calculation was based upon $15,000 being subscribed by the steam railroads, which have not yet finally reported. Since Saturday morning I have INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS.

William Ellis, a young colored man, had several bottles of brandy in his possession last night when Policeman Howell of the eighth precinct arrested him, but as the owner of the liquor was not known, the prisoner was taken to the Police Court this morning as an alleged suspicious person. It appears that some young colored n.an, alleged to be the defendant, has been seen on the streets at all hours of the night by policemen, and he claimed that he was working for Detective Lacy.

This information reached the detective, and he requested the officers to arrest the young man. Late last night Policeman Howell met him and placed him under arrest.

Howell met him and placed him under arrest.

When he reached court this morning he was turned over to the detectives at police headquarters, and it was soon learned that the brandy was stolen property. Two cases of the liquor had been stolen from in front of Ergood's store on 14th street, and Ellis was locked up until the case can be further investigated. The officers are satisfied that the theft was committed by persons other than Ellis, and think he was probably shielding them when he was pretending to be working for Delective Lacy. The officers are now locking for the prisoner's supposed confederates.

On Suspicion. This morning Detectives Horne and Weedon arrested Michael Nolan and locked him up on suspicion that he participated in the robbery of L. F. Fisher of 622 E street northwest. The robbery took place in the park near the Baltimore and Potoin the park near the Baltimore and Poto-mac depot. Fisher had met two young men, with whom he had several drinks, and was then "held up" and robbed of his watch, an album and a small amount of cash. The officers expect to make another arrest in the case this evening. They re-covered the stolen watch, which they traced to Nolan, and he says he bought it from a strange man.
